ATTORNEYS AT LAW

In 1960, Denver was poised for a building and population boom that would forever change not only the city's skyline, but also the fabric of the city itself. And Dufford & Brown was there.

From 1960 to today, we've been here, helping our clients, from emerging businesses to Colorado's largest employers, chart the present and prepare for the future – in the courtroom, the boardroom, and beyond.

And tomorrow? We'll be here too, helping clients from established industries to emergent ones navigate the shifting sands of a complex legal, regulatory, and business landscape.

The energy industry boomed in 1970. From oil, gas, oil shale, and coal to solar, Colorado was at the epicenter of energy. And Dufford & Brown was there.

Today, Colorado is once again at the forefront of a new energy boom. As Colorado – and the nation – look for new ways to power the future, Dufford & Brown will be there.

From traditional resources to alternative energy, we're helping our clients address regulatory requirements, manage strategic acquisitions and divestitures, and find the complicated balance between environmental concerns and energy production.

From oil, gas and coal to solar and wind, together with our clients, we're helping build Colorado's energy future.

Through booms and busts, Dufford & Brown has been there, helping clients forge new paths and find success good economic times and bad.

The 1980s were one of those times. As Colorado suffered through the fall of the energy markets, we were there, charting new directions for our clients in a changing economic and business market. From managing employment challenges to mitigating risk and protecting corporate assets, we were there.

And tomorrow, we'll be here, too, helping our clients adapt to shifting market conditions to find the silver lining that economic change often brings.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW

Colorado welcomed the Colorado Rockies, DIA, and a skyrocketing population in the 90s, and Dufford & Brown was there, helping our clients seize new market opportunities and capture growth in a booming economy.

Across industries in Colorado – energy, real estate, manufacturing, hospitality, services, and more – we worked in concert with our clients as they grew with the Colorado economy.

And tomorrow? You'll find us in the boardroom, the courtroom, and beyond, assisting our clients across the legal spectrum, from mergers and acquisitions to regulatory compliance and workforce management, to tap new market opportunities as they emerge.

In 2000, Colorado's population blossomed to more than 4 million as we ushered in a new decade and sidestepped long-predicted Y2K challenges.

The decade brought its ups and downs. Energy boomed again. Real estate skyrocketed before falling back to earth. The state witnessed political and economic change, along with the rest of the nation. And Dufford & Brown was there.

Through all the ups and downs, we've worked with our clients to meet their changing needs in corporate, securities, employment, commercial litigation, real estate, environmental, and natural resource management.

Now, a new decade is upon us. We'll be here for our clients today – and well beyond 2010.
